²⁾ In the calculation of net worth on the income tax return, use either Undepreciated acquisition cost for purposes of income tax or Comparison value, depending on which amount is greater at Fixed assets, financial assets, other assets and other long-term investments in total (Income Tax Act). Transfer the portion of fixed assets included in the greater amount to the field Financial-asset securities of the calculation of net worth, the portion of financial assets to Financial-asset securities, and the portion of other assets and other long-term investments to Securities.
